Special agents with the federal Food & Drug Administration and the Internal Revenue Service are investigating the case involving an alleged illegal

According to court documents provided by the IRS's Criminal Division — including plea agreements signed by both Daileys — Jim and Melanie Dailey were paid to write prescriptions for hydrocodone to customers of Birmingham, Ala.-based William & Mary Pharmacy, from Nov. 1, 2002, to Oct. 31, 2003, even though they did not "examine or otherwise have a legitimate doctor/patient relationship with such patients."

"The people that ran the William & Mary Pharmacy would solicit customers, then
