STEAMBOAT SPRINGS

Alan Lanning's role as Steamboat Springs' city manager will end Saturday.

The Steamboat Springs City Council voted unanimously Tuesday night to approve a severance agreement and news release announcing the end of Lanning's employment. Lanning did not attend the meeting, and Deputy City Manager Wendy DuBord acted as city manager in his place.

"After a number of months of struggling with management related issues, Mr. Lanning and the City Council have decided to part ways," the release states.

DuBord will fill Lanning's position until an interim city manager is chosen. The process to find qualified city manager candidates typically takes six to eight months, City Clerk Julie Jordan said. This is not DuBord's first time in the role, having served as interim city manager for seven months in 2006 after then-city manager Paul Hughes stepped down
