Rickshaw rides

JOHN F. RUSSELL/STAFF

Steamboat Springs cyclist Eric Zarrella heads home after a day of riding at Steamboat Ski Area. Zarrella said he often gives people rides on his rickshaw for tips, but it is otherwise just a great way to get around town.

Triple Crown bids grow

Softball tournament president receives as many as 8 other proposals

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS

Despite courting from several communities looking to snatch Triple Crown Sports from Steamboat Springs, President Dave King said Thursday that he hopes his company's youth baseball and softball tournaments stay put.

"We have other communities in the pipeline," King said. "But the goal obviously was, and still is, that the solution be with Steamboat Springs."

Triple Crown has a contract with Steamboat for two more summers of tournaments, most notably its World Series event held during a three-week period. Games also are played in other Routt County towns and Craig.

King hopes to sign a 10-year contract that would take effect in 2011. Preparing for the possibility that an agreement can't be reached with Steamboat —

where a debate constantly rages between the tourism dollars the tournaments bring to the city and concerns such as traffic, noise and other issues — the company put out a request for proposals last year for cities that would like to host all or
