"Outdoor recreation is a cornerstone of the Oak Creek lifestyle. Winter and summer recreational activities abound, with access to the Routt and White River National Forests, the Sarvis Creek and Flattop Wilderness areas, Stagecoach Reservoir State Park, and other public lands in close proximity. Oak Creek is also fortunate to have a beautiful town park, an ice skating and hockey facility and several other local recreational amenities within town."

2010 Oak Creek Comprehensive Plan

Introduction

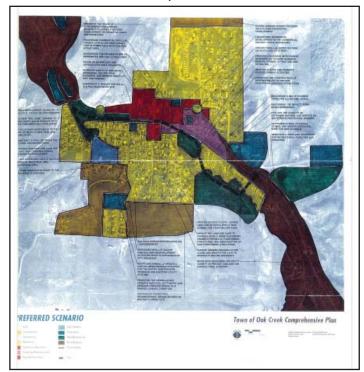

The Town of Oak Creek has exceptional access to recreational opportunities. Nevertheless, the 2010 Comprehensive plan asked that the town "prepare, adopt and annually update a Capital Improvement Program that will prioritize park and trail improvements, and adequately maintain the park system." This recreation master plan builds upon the recommendations set forth in the comprehensive plan in order to inform the Capital Improvement Program.

In preparing this Master Plan we have incorporated community input and information obtained during site visits. This document attempts to make the highest and best use of existing public lands, right-of-ways and community facilities in order to improve access to recreation within the town and encourage healthy living. While the document lists certain maintenance issues that we feel should be addressed, its broader goal is to connect existing facilities to one another via a system of trails and on-street pedestrian connections. Doing so will encourage residents to walk throughout town providing the health benefits of exercise, and opportunities for community interaction.

Conversations with Town Council and the Recreation Focus Group indicated that two of the town's highest priorities in terms of recreation planning include the creation of a new park on the site of the town's former sewage ponds and improving the creekside area of Decker Park. Conceptual plans for these two project have been included in this document.

Implementation of this plan and the policy guidelines included in the recreation section of the Comprehensive Plan will go a long way in maintaining and improving the exceptional recreation opportunities and quality of life that Oak Creek has to offer.
